Evictions and emotions on tense day in Gaza

Settlers rage at soldiers as pullout starts

By Andrea Stone

LONG ACRUE, Gaza — Israeli soldiers and police fired tear gas at a crowd of angry settlers who wanted to block a Gaza settlement from being evacuated. The settlers say that the eviction process has been going on for the past seven months and that they have no place to go.

The police reportedly used tear gas and rubber bullets to disperse the crowd. The settlers, who are mostly ultra-Orthodox Jews, have been living in the settlement for more than 20 years and say they have been trying to negotiate a peaceful resolution to the situation.

The Israeli government has ordered the evacuation of the settlement in accordance with a decision by the High Court. The settlers, however, have refused to comply and have been occupying the settlement in an attempt to prevent its eviction.

The tension in the area has increased in recent months, with occasional clashes between settlers and security forces.

Israel and the settlers' two nations

The settlers' claim to the land is based on the idea of a "two nations" solution, in which Israel and the Palestinians would share sovereignty over the region.

The Israeli government has also been accused of using excessive force to evict the settlers, and human rights groups have criticized the Israeli army's actions.

The settlers' presence in the area has been a source of tension and conflict, with the Israeli government and international organizations calling for a peaceful resolution to the situation.

Palestinians celebrate pullout as "turning point in conflict"

By Martin Feuer

USA TODAY

JERUSALEM, Israel — Palestinians celebrated the pullout of Israeli troops from Gaza as a "turning point in the conflict." The Israeli army had been in the territory for nearly 40 years, and the withdrawal marks a significant milestone in the ongoing conflict between Israelis and Palestinians.

The pullout is seen as a victory for the Palestinian leadership, which has been working for decades to achieve a Palestinian state.

The Israeli government has been under pressure to withdraw from the territories, and the announcement of the pullout has been met with mixed reactions from Israel's allies and enemies.

The pullout is expected to have a significant impact on the region, with implications for the stability of the Middle East and the future of the international community's role in the conflict.

Palestinians celebrate pullout as "turning point in conflict"

By Martin Feuer

USA TODAY

JERUSALEM, Israel — Palestinians celebrated the pullout of Israeli troops from Gaza as a "turning point in the conflict." The Israeli army had been in the territory for nearly 40 years, and the withdrawal marks a significant milestone in the ongoing conflict between Israelis and Palestinians.

The pullout is seen as a victory for the Palestinian leadership, which has been working for decades to achieve a Palestinian state.

The Israeli government has been under pressure to withdraw from the territories, and the announcement of the pullout has been met with mixed reactions from Israel's allies and enemies.

The pullout is expected to have a significant impact on the region, with implications for the stability of the Middle East and the future of the international community's role in the conflict.

Palestinians celebrate pullout as "turning point in conflict"

By Martin Feuer

USA TODAY

JERUSALEM, Israel — Palestinians celebrated the pullout of Israeli troops from Gaza as a "turning point in the conflict." The Israeli army had been in the territory for nearly 40 years, and the withdrawal marks a significant milestone in the ongoing conflict between Israelis and Palestinians.

The pullout is seen as a victory for the Palestinian leadership, which has been working for decades to achieve a Palestinian state.

The Israeli government has been under pressure to withdraw from the territories, and the announcement of the pullout has been met with mixed reactions from Israel's allies and enemies.

The pullout is expected to have a significant impact on the region, with implications for the stability of the Middle East and the future of the international community's role in the conflict.

Palestinians celebrate pullout as "turning point in conflict"

By Martin Feuer

USA TODAY

JERUSALEM, Israel — Palestinians celebrated the pullout of Israeli troops from Gaza as a "turning point in the conflict." The Israeli army had been in the territory for nearly 40 years, and the withdrawal marks a significant milestone in the ongoing conflict between Israelis and Palestinians.

The pullout is seen as a victory for the Palestinian leadership, which has been working for decades to achieve a Palestinian state.

The Israeli government has been under pressure to withdraw from the territories, and the announcement of the pullout has been met with mixed reactions from Israel's allies and enemies.

The pullout is expected to have a significant impact on the region, with implications for the stability of the Middle East and the future of the international community's role in the conflict.

Palestinians celebrate pullout as "turning point in conflict"

By Martin Feuer

USA TODAY

JERUSALEM, Israel — Palestinians celebrated the pullout of Israeli troops from Gaza as a "turning point in the conflict." The Israeli army had been in the territory for nearly 40 years, and the withdrawal marks a significant milestone in the ongoing conflict between Israelis and Palestinians.

The pullout is seen as a victory for the Palestinian leadership, which has been working for decades to achieve a Palestinian state.

The Israeli government has been under pressure to withdraw from the territories, and the announcement of the pullout has been met with mixed reactions from Israel's allies and enemies.

The pullout is expected to have a significant impact on the region, with implications for the stability of the Middle East and the future of the international community's role in the conflict.

Palestinians celebrate pullout as "turning point in conflict"

By Martin Feuer

USA TODAY

JERUSALEM, Israel — Palestinians celebrated the pullout of Israeli troops from Gaza as a "turning point in the conflict." The Israeli army had been in the territory for nearly 40 years, and the withdrawal marks a significant milestone in the ongoing conflict between Israelis and Palestinians.

The pullout is seen as a victory for the Palestinian leadership, which has been working for decades to achieve a Palestinian state.

The Israeli government has been under pressure to withdraw from the territories, and the announcement of the pullout has been met with mixed reactions from Israel's allies and enemies.

The pullout is expected to have a significant impact on the region, with implications for the stability of the Middle East and the future of the international community's role in the conflict.

Palestinians celebrate pullout as "turning point in conflict"

By Martin Feuer

USA TODAY

JERUSALEM, Israel — Palestinians celebrated the pullout of Israeli troops from Gaza as a "turning point in the conflict." The Israeli army had been in the territory for nearly 40 years, and the withdrawal marks a significant milestone in the ongoing conflict between Israelis and Palestinians.

The pullout is seen as a victory for the Palestinian leadership, which has been working for decades to achieve a Palestinian state.

The Israeli government has been under pressure to withdraw from the territories, and the announcement of the pullout has been met with mixed reactions from Israel's allies and enemies.

The pullout is expected to have a significant impact on the region, with implications for the stability of the Middle East and the future of the international community's role in the conflict.

Palestinians celebrate pullout as "turning point in conflict"

By Martin Feuer

USA TODAY

JERUSALEM, Israel — Palestinians celebrated the pullout of Israeli troops from Gaza as a "turning point in the conflict." The Israeli army had been in the territory for nearly 40 years, and the withdrawal marks a significant milestone in the ongoing conflict between Israelis and Palestinians.

The pullout is seen as a victory for the Palestinian leadership, which has been working for decades to achieve a Palestinian state.

The Israeli government has been under pressure to withdraw from the territories, and the announcement of the pullout has been met with mixed reactions from Israel's allies and enemies.

The pullout is expected to have a significant impact on the region, with implications for the stability of the Middle East and the future of the international community's role in the conflict.